POMPEH AS A BALLET.

Threatened Litigation Over the Two Shows Compromised.

The threatened litigation between the two "Last Days of Pompeil" shows has been compromised, G. H. Hamilton & Co., the firm that is to give the show near the fair grounds, beginning to-morrow, making certain agreements with James Pain & Sons, the firm that is to give the big spectacle in September. The following is the agreement of Hamilton & Co.: That no representation of the eruption of Mount Vesuvius in any way, shape or form will be given; that no representation of the dedestruction of Pompeil by the eruption of Mount Vesuvius will be given; that no pyrotechnics whatever are to be used on the stage, and the fireworks will merely be detached pieces exhibited on the grounds aside from, not connected with nor portraying or attempting to portray any scene in the "Last Days of Pompeli;" that only drama with ballet and specialties from Bulwer's novel, performed by actors speak-ing their parts, as in the ordinary theaters, will be presented, and that advertisements, so far as they are contrary to the above, are incorrect, misleading and will at once be withdrawn.

THE GAS TRUST'S PLEA

IT PETITIONS THE COUNCIL TO ADOPT THE SYSTEM OF METERS.

Wants to Charge Twenty Cents a Thousand and Pay No Tax on Its Gas Mains.

The Consumers' Gas Trust Company has announced itself as favoring the meter system, and in support of this system and as reasons why the proposed tax on the mains should not be levied, sent the follow-

"The undersigned trustees and directors of the Consumers' Gas Trust Company have accepted their respective offices and undertaken the duties of the same nominally for the company, in truth, for the benefit of all the people of this community. Through much tribulation the company has risen to its fullest usefulness, meeting the most sanguine expectations of its generous supporters in supplying a large number of patrons—now thirteen thousand—with fuel for six years at a lower rate than ever furnished to the people of any city removed from the immediate vicinity of the gas fields and in paying off the large debt incurred for the construction of its great plant. All this is a special source of satisfaction to those generous and public-spirited citizens who have so loyally given their money and patronage to establish and maintain to successful development a corporation built by and for the

"After six years of prosperity in de-livering to the people of Indianapolis the greatest physical blessing ever brought to community the company is approaching crisis so serious, in the judgment of the management, as to call for thoughtful consideration on the part of every well-meaning citizen. To preserve a full supply of fuel gas to its patrons the company has been obliged every year to reach out to remoter fields, drilling many wells and extending great pipe plants at very heavy cost. The limit of extension is nearly reached. Many of the wells are wet; nearly reached. ly all show moisture when drawn heavily upon and must be held back or risk the danger of being flooded out. Twenty-nine of our wells have reached this stage; they are flooded and valueless. The average field pressure has slowly but surely fallen off and now stands reduced from 320 pounds, original pressure, to 249 pounds average pressure over the field.

"The gravity of the situation can only be understood when it is known that 225 pounds pressure at the head of the main lines is absolutely necessary to force the gas to the city limits with su sure to distribute it through the low pressure city lines to the patrons; and this, too, when all the reducing stations' district valves are wide open and every facility af-forded for free circulation. There remains now but an average of twenty-four pounds margin above the limit of low pressure. At the present annual rate of pressure reduction and by a continuance of the present extravagant and wasteful method of consumption this margin of twenty-four pounds will be spent or exhausted in two years. The use of pumps for artificial pressure is fraught with most serious risk of reducing the gas pressure below the water pressure, and so destroying the wells. It is the plain duty of every good citizen to co-operate to the fullest extent to preserve the supply of gas so long as it is possible to do so. It is the plain duty of the trustees and directors to sound the note of alarm and to point out the way by which the flow of gas can be prolonged and this great source of comfort and convenience continued over the longest possible

"The present consumption of gas is with-out doubt fully fifty per cent, in excess of actual necessity. This profligate waste of such valuable fuel is inexcusable. If it is possible to check this extravagance the management believes the endurance of the supply may be extended several years. There is but one way to stop this reckless wastefulness, and that is to require each patron to pay for just what the patron uses—no more no less. This can only be done by the use of a meter. Experience has shown that this is the only just and equitable way of selling natural gas. The price per thousand feet should be approximately the same as charged in cities where conditions are similar. The following are the net meter rates per thousand feet charged in other cities: Detroit, Lima, Piqua, Springfield, Toledo and Buffalo, 25 cents; Pittsburg, Allegheny and Erie, 221/2 cents; Jamestown and Corry, 21 6-10 cents; Fostoria, Columbus and Logansport, 20

"There are still 2,600 of our citizens hold-ing the stock of the company, the money for which went toward the building of this company's plant for the benefit of themselves and neighbors. They have never asked, nor received, nor expected, nor can they receive a cent of profit; in fact, they have not received the full payment for the interest due them on the money they have virtually loaned for the good of the general public. The time has come when the trustees and directors realize that their duty calls for protection to all concerned. The shareholders must be protected as well as the patrons, and it is the intention of the management to apply the first available funds in payment on the interest and principal of the debt due the shareholders. The heavy annual expense for maintaining the supply of gas has so far prevented the re-turn of any of the capital. While the share-holder is only to receive his principal money with 8 per cent. interest per annum, he is in all honesty entitled to that much, and it is part of the duty of the management to make provision for that before the supply of gas fails, if it is possible to do so, and it is believed that every good citizen will approve of this effort. The signers of this appeal have no personal gain in view; they are endeavoring to place before the public, in plain language, the truth of the situation. The trustees and directors have given their services at much sacrifice all these years, without compensation, except for the president, who for the past three and a half years has acted as attorney for the com-pany in all its litigation, and has only been paid as such attorney. The directors are willing to continue the care of this property if chosen by the trustees to do so, but they are unwilling to go further without making known to all concerned the danger now imminent. "The trustees and directors feel that, in view of the fact that the affairs of this company are no longer in the ascendency, the continuance of the supply of gas is threatened, that no artificial fuel gas has been discovered that would serve as a substitute at living prices when the natural gas fails, every effort should now be made, first, to prolong the life of gas supply by every possible restriction of waste, and, second, to settle with the shareholders who generously advanced the money with which to bring this fuel to the homes of the people. To this end we ur-gently appeal to the people and the City Council: First, that no special burden of taxation on the pipe lines be assessed against the company, for the reason that at this time the general public has had all the benefits and only the few have borne the burden of investment; second, that the natural gas ordinance be so amended that all natural gas sold in the city be charged for by meter measurement at the rate of 20 cents a thousand feet for domestic consumption and 10 cents a thousand feet for manufacturing purposes; that the patrons shall pay for the meters selected by the company; that the meters shall be under the control of the company, and, when necessary, repaired at the expense of the

"In anticipation of the discussion of this statement, the signers have only to say that this appeal is correct and truthful so far as their knowledge and judgment en-ables them to understand the situation, and they cordially invite the most thorough and critical examination thereof, and respectfully leave the result in the hands of the City Council and the people, confidently counting upon their intelligent investigation and co-operation.'

This was signed by F. A. Morris, John W. Murphy, John H. Holliday, John M. Butler, trustees, and Robert N. Lamb, Eli Lilly, Fred Fahnley, J. F. Pratt, H. H. Hanna, C. W. Fairbanks, J. P. Frenzel, Henry Coburn and A. A. Barnes, directors.

THE THREE-CENT TAX. A communication was also received from the city attorney, in which he sets forth that he thought it advisable to enact separate ordinances and not include the taxes upon the various corporations using the streets in one omnibus ordinance. The ordinance providing for a tax upon the natural-gas mains was introduced. It provides for a tax of 3 cents per lineal foot on all mains actually maintained on Oct. 1 of the year during which the tax is levied, and provides for the assessment on Nov. 1. It requires the company to file with the city controller a plat showing the location and extent of all mains, which is to be verified by affidavit. A penalty of $500 is fixed for failure to comply with the ordinance, and each day of failure to comply is to be a separate offense. The ordinance was referred to the finance committee. An ordinance was introduced declaring the bodies in the vaults at Greenlawn

Cemetery to be a nuisance and ordering the abatement of the nuisance. It was re-

The ordinance providing for the asphalt-ing of West streat, from New York to Washington street, was referred to the committee on sewers, streets and alleys. The ordinance requiring the L. E. & W. and Big Four railroads to place a flagman at the Vermont-street crossing was referred to the railroad committee. The name of John street, in the southeastern part of the city, was changed to Dawson street in honor of Sergeant-at-arms Dawson of the Council. There were two streets of that name in the city before the change. The Mayor sent a communication asking that the railroad committee take no action on viaducts until the present elevated tracks question evolves itself into shape.

Whereas, The present strike growing out of differences between the Pullman company and its employes is threatening to again disturb the business of the country and is developing a disregard of property rights and an utter defiance of law and order, together with an attempt to deprive our citizens of the right guaranteed to all American citizens to labor. travel and transact business without the interference of bodies of men who arbitrarily propose to stop the peaceable transaction of business in the country; there-

"Resolved. That we commend and approve the prompt action of Governor Matthews in suppressing lawlessness and protecting property during the recent strike of the coal miners, and respectfully request that equally prompt action be taken by him and the city officials for the protection of the commercial interests of our city and State at the present time."

Memorial Windows.

A number of memorial windows are to be placed in Meridian-street M. E. Church. The first will be put in this week and will be for Mrs. Elizabeth H. Coffin. Memorial and dedicatory services will be held in connection with the usual services next Sunday morning. The date will be the first anniversary of the death of Mrs. Coffin. A window for Daniel Stewart and one for John H. Stewart will be placed in the church some time this year.

The Old Fourth of July.

The old-fashioned Fourth of July celebration at Armstrong Park will be an all-day affair, costing adults 20 cents instead of 25 cents, as heretofore announced. Gov. ## THE CAT AND HIS PAW

J. P. FRENZEL-MARTINDALE ELECT-ED PRESIDENT OF SCHOOL BOARD.

Applies Gag Law and Kills the Resolutions Providing for Interest on the School Funds.

John P. Frenzel is still the boss of the School Board. The public has had its eye on the "cat" for some time and has voted to purify the schools of the obnoxious Frenzelism, but through the machinations of Frenzel, that boss is still in control. His understudy was last night elected president of the School Board and his man Adam was re-elected treasurer. The public has little hope now of securing interest on the school moneys until Frenzelism is completely routed at the next school election. The programme was cut and dried by Frenzel and carried out at the meeting of the board last night.

The retiring board began its last session at 8 o'clock and adjourned early. The committee on buildings and grounds reported that school No. 5 had been completed and recommended that $7,000 be borrowed to meet the expenses of improvements on High School No. 1 and schools Nos. 16, 17 and 23. The committee further recommended the sale of school property No. 35 and the purchase of grounds more centrally located. The committee on teachers and salaries advised the appointment of George Rink and Mrs. Pearl Wilkinson to the departments of German and music.

The president announced that the committee having in charge the Gregg bequest had arranged for the distribution of scholarships and places of study. A moment before the old board adjourned, Commissioner Martindale passed a document over to the secretary. It expressed the appreciation of the board of the efforts of the retiring president and of Commissioners Conner and Vonnegut. Mr. Frenzel arose to thank the board for its expression. He paid a high compliment to the superintendent, his assistants and the corps of teachers and believed that Indianapolis had the best executive ability at the head of its schools in the world. He referred proudly to the school of manual training and physical culture, and hoped that the finances of the schools would permit an extension of such as would give the city the best system in these departments to be had. He also advised the injection into the city schools of the kindergarten system. In concluding, he said:

"Of course I have made mistakes, but my intention has been to fill this place to the best of my ability. I have been criti-cised, but the man in a public office may expect that. However, there is a vast difference in criticism, and the tendency to prejudge the motives of public officials. My relations with the members of this board have been the most pleasant, and I feel that I cannot do a greater duty to the incoming board than commend to its members the superintendent and his corps

The newly elected members were awaiting the conclusion of the retiring president's remarks, and at the close took the seats vacated by the retiring members. The new members, who are Frank H. Blackledge, Frank Vonnegut, H. C. Hendrickson and Fred D. Appel, were all present. Commissioner Adam moved that Mr. Russe occupy the chair temporarily and the board immediately began the selection of a president. As the chairman was about to call for the vote on president Mr. Blackledge arose with a resolution which he desired to introduce. Mr. Martindale arose to a point of order and a smart dialogue ensued before the Frenzel crowd succeeded in reseating the dis-turber. Mr. Blackledge placed in nomina-tion H. C. Hendrickson for president. Mr. Martindale's name was not before the board, the Frenzelites having already arranged his canvass. His election resulted on the first ballot. Hendrickson received three votes and 'Martindale seven. Mr. Martindale promptly seated himself at the president's desk with the remark: "The last incumbent raised this place to one of dignity and honor. At the close of my term I will not have detracted anything

With this extremely delicate compliment to himself Mr. Martindale called for nominations for the office of treasurer. Mr. Vonnegut announced the name of Frank H. Blackledge. He said that Mr. Blackledge had been elected with the understanding that he would work for the payment of interest on the school funds. This statement was flung among the Frenzelites, who received it with snarls. Mr. Hendrickson arose to speak, but was flatly told that he was out of order by President Martindale. After a number of ineffectual attempts to make himself heard, he sat down. By a singular coincidence Mr. Adam's name was not placed before the board, but he was elected treasurer on the first ballot by a vote of 7 to 2. Mr. Hendrickson named Mr. Vonnegut for the office of secretary, but he was defeated by Mr. Appel by a vote of 6 to 4. The election of secretary was followed by the unanimous selection of Miss Emma Ridenour to the office of assistant secretary, Charles A. Dryer was re-elected attorney for the board over W. L. Taylor, who was proposed by Mr. Blackledge. Then, on the motion of Mr. Russe, the bond of the treas-urer was placed at $100,000. The crowning feature of Frenzelism came when Mr. Russe introduced a motion providing for the ap-pointment of John P. Frenzel and John B. Conner as advisory members of the committee on School for Manual Training, Messrs, Hendrickson and Blackledge sprang to their feet and characterized the resolution as a cut-and-dried scheme of the Frenzel men. They thought it was an intimation that the new board could not manage its own affairs. 'Ine motion was put while the protesters were yet speaking, and carried by a vote of 8 to 2. At the conclusion of this vote Mr. Blackledge arose with a bit of paper in his hand. The Frenzel men scented trouble, and a motion to adjourn by Mr. Russe was seconded by Mr. Adam. "But I desire to be heard," said Mr. Blackledge. "You are out of order," shouted the president. "There is a motion to adjourn. "I say that it was not seconded before I arose with this resolution-"All in favor of the motion to adjourn screamed Mr. Martindale, as say 'aye,' " screamed Mr. Martindale, as Mr. Blackledge wildly waved his resolution. The vote to adjourn was overwhelming, and the Frenzelites scattered. The resolutions which Mr. Blackledge desired to introduce, and which created marked consternation in the Frenzel ranks were to the effect that the board instruct the treasurer to place the school funds at the highest rate of interest to be had, and that the attorney be directed to investigate the notes and obligations entered into by the School Board on July 2, 1894. The Magazine Club's Programme. The programme of the Magazine Club for 894-95 appeared yesterday. Investments must be made or changed, propositions examined and sifted, and numerous difficulties must be solved. In the choice of such an agent there are several essential qualifications, such as character, experience, ability and good judgment. These are more likely to be found in a Trust Company, which must also be financially responsible and subject to State supervision, than in an individual, and combined with them is permanence, which no individual can be sure of.
